Student Will Witness History

■ Rachel Jones of Baldwinsville will travel to Hong Kong as a guest of her SU roommate. She will be there during the transfer of power to China.

By KENNETH TERRELL

Most college students think they're lucky if their freshman-year roommate doesn't give them trouble.

Rachel Jones' roommate is giving her the chance to be a part of history.

Jones, a sophomore at Syracuse University, is flying to Hong Kong today to visit her roommate, Emily Chan, Jones, 19, will witness Britain's transfer of the Asian colony to China.

"I'll be there at 6 in the morning on the 30th, and then everything happens at midnight," she said. "We're going to have dinner at (a restaurant) on the highest point in Hong Kong to watch the fireworks for the takeover."

The trip to Hong Kong will be Jones' first trip out of the country. She raised the money for the journey by working two jobs while taking classes toward her music industry major.

She got her passport during spring break.

"I'm very excited," she said. "I really want to see how people live there. There are so many people, and it's only the size of Rhode Island. I'd like to see the whole country."

"We've been best friends ever since we met," Jones said. "She said, 'It would be great if you could go see Hong Kong. I just basically wanted to see her and go visit.'"
